

separation of molecules macromolecules pdf

The hydrophobic effect is the observed tendency of nonpolar substances to aggregate in an aqueous solution and exclude water molecules. The word hydrophobic literally means "water-fearing", and it describes the segregation of water and nonpolar substances, which maximizes hydrogen bonding between molecules of water and minimizes the area of contact between water and nonpolar molecules.

Membrane technology covers all engineering approaches for the transport of substances between two fractions with the help of permeable membranes. In general, mechanical separation processes for separating gaseous or liquid streams use membrane technology.

Polymeric gas-separation membranes were commercialized 30 years ago. The interest on these systems is increasing because of the simplicity of concept and low-energy consumption. In the refinery, gas separation is needed in many processes such as natural gas treatment, carbon dioxide capture, hydrogen purification, and hydrocarbons separations.

1. Introduction. Since 1960s, when the first commercial membrane was invented via phase inversion method, significant milestones in the development of membrane separation technologies have been scientifically and commercially achieved. Following the remarkable invention, several major processes including reverse osmosis, ultrafiltration, microfiltration and gas separation have been established ...

L'endocytose (grec endon (dedans) et kutos (cellule)) est le mécanisme de transport de molécules voire de particules (virales, bactériennes, etc.) vers l'intérieur de la cellule. L'endocytose peut être effectuée par toutes les cellules eucaryotes à l'exception des hématies (globules rouges)
